I	Incomplete a temporary - - grade given in cases where students have not completed course requirements due to reasons beyond their control. The course requirements must be completed and a grade submitted within the first three weeks of the following semester (fall or spring) or the "I" automatically becomes an "F."
W	Withdrawn - - Grades of Incomplete - A grade of incomplete in a course should be given to a student only when he has failed to complete a major assignment or examination due to serious illness or a problem of similar magnitude. In cases where students have not completed certain course requirements due to laxity, procrastination, or other manifestations of irresponsibility, grades of F for such requirements should be entered on the roster and the final grade calculated accordingly.

Welcome to the wonderful world of economics! This course is designed to introduce students to microeconomic and macroeconomic concepts that affect their daily lives. This course provides students with the fundamentals of economic literacy and understanding. Students will explore such major economic issues as monopolistic power, inflation and recession, government spending and taxation, the banking system, and international trade. We will study concepts such as market structures, supply, demand, prices, labor, personal finance, investing, globalization, how the government interacts with the economy, and much more! This course is designed for students who anticipate no further formal training in economics.

- ★ Students are expected to be self-directed learners, in-depth thinkers and effective communicators.
- ★ Students will deepen their understanding of the economic problems faced by the nation and the world.
- ★ Quantitative Reasoning: Students will work with graphical, numerical or symbolic models to solve problems and interpret results.

Students will be required to use and apply tools (such as graphs, tables, statistics, & equations) to their understanding of economic laws and principles.

★ Critical Analysis and Reasoning: Students will formulate or evaluate arguments, problems or opinions and arrive at a solution, position or hypothesis based on carefully considered evidence.

- My goal is to teach basic economic theory by applying important theoretical concepts to real-world, present-day economic issues.
- This is an introductory course in economics that integrates theory and contemporary issues in economics and political economy.
- You will find that economic issues are intriguing, far-reaching, and incredibly relevant to your everyday life.

Upon completion of this course, students will be able to:

- Differentiate between Microeconomics and Macroeconomics issues
- Identify concepts of opportunity cost, scarcity, demand, supply, world wealth and world poverty as social and economic problems
- Discuss various market systems, e.g. mixed economies and market economies
- Describe causes of market failure and the role of government in such markets
- Explain the economies of big business and imperfect competition
- Explain the basic Macroeconomic concepts, e.g. international trade, unemployment, inflation and economic growth
- Analyze the role of government spending and taxation

- Participation adds interest, engages students, provides the teacher feedback, students feedback, develops important speaking skills, encourages dialogue among and between students, gives students the opportunity to practice using the language of the discipline, can be used to balance who's contributing in class and how much, promotes preparation, and control what's happening in class.
